I am unable to attend the public meeting on 7 November 2018 in Mudgee, but I want to object to this proposal.

There are many reasons for my objection, but the main one is based on the climate effect of burning the coal produced by this mine. The IPCC has recently published a new report which states that to achieve the warming limits agreed at the 2015 Paris Climate Conference, there should be no coal-burning power stations operating beyond 2050. So this is not the time to be opening up a new coal mine. Now, the only safe place for coal is buried underground.
