Myth-busting and truth-telling from an expert with 40+ years of experience in forest ecology. Dr David Lindenmayer's new book, The Forest Wars, "sets out everything you should know about why we need to stop native forest logging." Lindenmayer has earned the right to talk straight and everyone should listen - starting with this interview

"The bottom line is, they should not be logging forests at all with an endangered species. It's completely nuts."

"To me, it's ridiculous to think that we should be even contemplating logging in an endangered species area. Why do we even have endangered species legislation? Why do we even have an EPA if this is the kind of pseudo-regulation we're going to get?"

"NSW should be out of native forest logging. That will save the taxpayers a motza and it will save many of our endangered species."

"I'm sick of hearing this **** that I've had to deal with for the last 40 years."
