Why would anyone propose to build an ugly, health hazzard in one of the pristine jewels of NSW?

People travel to the highlands to enjoy the beauty of the area. Now it's proposed to damage the tourist trade by erecting a giant health hazzard which will also impact on Sydney's water supply.

People have been advised they can lower the health risks by reducing their outdoor activities???

How dare they build this monster in such a pristine area and risk the health of the residents?

Look at alternative sites away from residential areas.
