Moss Vale, along with the greater Wingecaribee and Wollondilly shire council areas, are one of the few rural areas left in outer Sydney. The green hills, clean air and wide open spaces without eye sores, are unfortunately now a rarity.

Do not allow the development of an inexperienced plastic refinery company, to create the headway for the first major environmental disaster in the area.

A site such as this, must NOT be placed in, or in close proximity, to any water catchment areas, schools, hospitals or national parks, or otherwise environmentally or culturally sensitive areas.

If these people are so intent on protecting the environment, have them do it out west, and at a great distance from residents and environmentally sensitive areas. Better still, have them ship it back to their country of origin and process it there, where they obviously don't care about air quality issues.

Do not force residents to stay inside for their own health, when many move to, or attend schools in the area, to ESCAPE the polluted cesspool that is Western Sydney.
