Twenty-four years ago, I moved to the Southern Highlands from Sydney to start a new life with my wife and infant son. We came for clean air and water, less traffic and a healthy lifestyle. All these things are threatened by the pollution that will result from this heavy-industrial project and others like it, which will no doubt follow once our environment is compromised.

At a time when so-called forever chemicals are being discovered in waterways, and their terrible effects realised, it seems incomprehensible they should be allowed to contaminate our water supply and that of Sydney.

And why would the government allow this development in a spot so close to residential areas? These residents will have their lives impacted by a 24/7, highly toxic facility that requires trucks to drive past their homes day and night, and which will likely result in their lungs becoming filled with microplastics.

I understand the importance of recycling and support it in principle, but it must be done in an appropriate site. Moss Vale is not such a site.
