Moss Vale is a beautiful Highlands village, attracting visitors and tree-changers. Do we really have to stuff-up such a precious location with this Plasrefine development? It's bewildering that the powers-that-be haven't encouraged the developer to relocate to a site most suitable (in fact Wendy Tuckerman has offered to find a more suitable location)

The likely deterioration of air quality is of great concern to me - both for Moss Vale residents generally, and myself in particular. I currently live just over the hill, and worry because I suffer from asthma (in fact my parents sent me to boarding school in Moss Vale because the pristine air here was known to be helpful to those with breathing disorders. I fear I will have to move if Plasrefine gets the green light.

I guess my overview is that places of beauty should be protected. We need beauty in our lives.
