The idea of having a plastic refinery in my home town disgusts me. Knowing my family and the community's health will be drastically affected by the fumes and pollution to the Wingecarribee river. Moss Vale will no longer be livable. The effects of Plasrefine is almost on the same level of planting a nuclear power plant. To those who think this is an ethical and sustainable development are simply naive. The idea of a plastic recycling plant seems good on paper but the effects of powering such a facility are drastically more damaging. This project isn't for a sustainable future, it's for greedy and selfish people to find a new way to blind the community and steal their money and resources. It's cruel, and unjust to think that this is even being approved and could happen any time soon. Do we really live with truly evil and insane people that think this will benefit Australia?! Writing this even boils my blood, as I try to be as calm and reasonable when writing this. If this isn't a sign of the collective anger and disappointment in this government, then they're entirely blind and ignorant.
