I visit the highlands regularly as I have family and friends there and am amazed that such a proposal can have been made in such a close residential area.

The refinery in Parkes has a 10 kilometre radius away from residential areas. It is proposed the refinery will be 200m from the neighbouring property.

How can this monstrosity even be considered in the highlands where people have been told to limit their outdoor activities and on certain days not to leave their residences.

I ride a push bike regularly around Beaconsfield Road, Lackey Road and down to Medway, it would be disappointing to have the air quality reduced as this is the reason why people move out into these rural areas. I also don't believe that the surrounding roads are properly equipped to deal with 200 plus truck movements each day.
