My objection to Plasrefine is the proposed site on which it is to be built. We need plastics to be recycled and we need industry for jobs but greater consideration needs to be given to the sites in respect of noise, traffic, environmental issues relating to air and water catchment. We already have microplastics in our bodies from food and water.

Why can't the government find a less populated more remote area to build these type of facilities? Perhaps an area for several similar industries where air and water runoff etc could be closely monitored.
