We brought our five acres on beaconsfield road six years ago to raise our girls. We found our piece of paradise close to town and the girls where able to have there horses and dogs and play outside and be kids and enjoy life away from the city. Now we are being told that if plasrefine goes ahead that my children will have to reduce there time spent outside due to the air quality. What kind of life is that?

Not the life we had planned or worked so hard to build and make.

We live just a couple of hundred metres from the site. My children go to in bowral so when the wind blows which it does all the time In moss vale it will blow straight into bowral where my children and and countless other children are at school. They will never be away from this.

When my [REDACTED] asks me how long would it take to build if this goes ahead because i want to old enough to move away so i dont sick.

How would that make you feel?

Please this is not the right site. what would you do if it was your kids or grandkids? Would you want them this close to something that could potentially harm them
