The Southern Highlands is popular with retirees who enjoy clean air and the surrounding countryside in its natural state. No individual, young or old, should be forced to breathe in pollution from a plastic processing plant. Micro plastics are an increasing health hazard, not just in our oceans, but in the air around us. This proposed development is of grave concern - especially for those with asthma, bronchitis or other respiratory health problems. Any such processing must be located completely away from communities. Whilst this may involve extra transportation expenses, it should not prohibit processing in an isolated location, away from homes, schools and businesses.
